Nashville Airport Authority Promotes Gary Glover to Lieutenant

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – The Metropolitan Nashville Airport Authority (MNAA) recently promoted Gary Glover, formerly a sergeant in its Department of Public Safety, to the position of lieutenant.

“Gary exemplifies the MNAA’s top priorities: providing safe and secure facilities,” said Raul Regalado, president and CEO of the MNAA. “This promotion recognizes Gary’s vital role in the MNAA team’s collective efforts to provide the Nashville Airports Experience to our passengers, partners, and employees.”

As a lieutenant, Glover is responsible for total supervision and management of the overall operation of an assigned shift, including serving as incident commander at a major incident scene. This position is the top command position of each shift and serves to promote leadership for assigned command.

Glover joined the MNAA team in 1992. His experience at the MNAA includes serving as the Public Safety Department’s training officer and leading the Hazardous Materials Team. In 1995, he was recognized as Officer of the Year.

Glover holds a bachelor’s degree in Criminal Justice from Middle Tennessee State University and is a graduate of Northwestern University Police Staff and Command School. He is former member of the Tennessee Air National Guard.
