NASHVILLE AIRPORT ROCKS

(Nashville, TN) – Next time you're at the airport don't forget to cop a squat (or sit a spell) in one of the white, ladder-back Hinkle rocking chairs. That's right, rocking chairs.

Cracker Barrel has donated 20 traditional rocking chairs to the airport in an effort to enhance the sense of southern charm and hospitality one feels while at the airport. The chairs arrived Wednesday, June 18 and are located in front of the Capitol Grill restaurant.

"We wanted to add something to the Nashville Airport that epitomized southern charm but was also functional and inviting, and we believe rocking chairs are the perfect solution," said Raul L. Regalado, President and CEO for Metropolitan Nashville Airport Authority .

The chairs are produced by the Hinkle family in Springfield, Tennessee and have been for more than six generations.

"There's something about a Hinkle rocker that just makes people feel comfortable and welcome. Nashville is famous for its hospitality, and Cracker Barrel Old Country Store is honored to be a part of that tradition. These rockers will hopefully be one of the nice memories folks will have when they think of Nashville," said Amy Brewer, Outdoor Program Manager, Cracker Barrel Old Country Store, Inc.
